Version #1

Basic Rules

version 1.0

★ You play as a single creature, and your opponent (or also you if you're playing solo) will act as the PCG master summoning monsters and rolling attack and defense for those creatures.

★ Attacking: For attacking you look at how much attack a creature has shown by their stat box in the game. If your creature has 3 attack, roll 3 six-sided dice (1d6) and 1-5-6 are a hit!!!. Then the defending creature rolls the number of defense dice, 1-2 are blocks. If a damage would go through subtract one of their HP. Once a creature drops down to 0 you may kill it and take its loot. (If it has any)

★ On your turn you may

- move (However far the PCG master thinks you could go)
- attack
- Pick up something
- Jump
- use an item such as a Rope

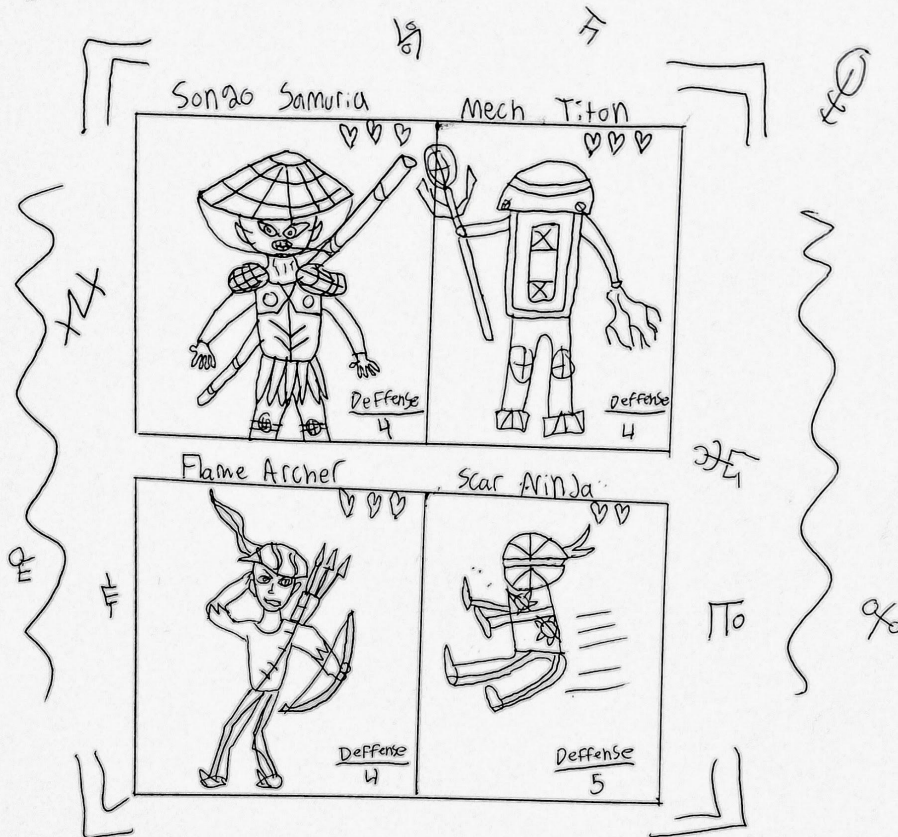

★ Once you've completed an action (unless your PCG master lets you have two actions) the opponent/monsters can do an action

(Optional)

★ If you don't wanna play with dice, just treat this like a normal PCG and skip all the extra rules.

★ Your PCG master could also roll a 1d6 to see if you make a fail or success in your action
